COURSE POLICIES

Academic Freedom and the Nature of Studies in the Humanities
This course, like most courses in the Humanities, investigates and queries a vast range of human ideas, behaviors, and concepts featured in literature as well as in life. These include class, gender, sexuality, politics, religion, and alterities within these areas and concepts. These may be offensive to some students. It is the responsibility of each student to review the syllabus and listed readings to decide if this may be the case. If you have questions, please contact the instructor to determine if this course is indeed suitable for you. This should be done during the first week of the semester to accommodate other enrollment options.

Books and readings:
Kennedy & Gioia, Literature. An Introduction to Fiction, Poetry, and Drama; Shelley, Mary, Frankenstein (ISBN 0-321-42883-8); and online texts and handouts. Some of the readings for this course will be available online on the course website, http://www.public.asu.edu/~cajsa/eng200_spring2009. With works posted online, you will need to print the primary texts and bring the printout to class for reference. To save paper I recommend you print double-sided if possible. You should always bring the current readings of the day with you to class. Some resources on the course website are password protected. If prompted for username/password, use “edrama” and “open” (without quotation marks).

Books are available in the ASU Bookstore. If you already own a different edition of any of the listed works, please see me to discuss if this edition is acceptable for this course.

Attendance & Participation:
Attendance at all classes is mandatory. Students who miss four or more class meeting will be dropped one whole letter grade on final grade. Students who miss six or more class meetings cannot pass this course. If you have been absent from class, please refrain from asking me if “you missed anything.” For further information please see http://www.library.utoronto.ca/canpoetry/wayman/poem5.htm

Classroom Protocol/Participation:
We will spend much of our class time in discussion and analysis of the works we are reading. Regardless of the class format, you are expected to be prepared, to listen, to contribute, and to participate in an interested and knowledgeable fashion. As literature is a highly audible art form students will be required to recite and read out loud in class. Always bring the texts of the day with you to class.

Structure:
Mondays: In-class meeting with introductory lectures and instruction in LL 274 (2:30-3:15 PM)
Wednesdays: Online discussion and assignments posted weekly.
• Online discussion prompts are posted every Monday evening.
• You have until the following Friday evening to post your response(s).
• 2 response/week required by all students. Responses should be about 100 words, thoughtful and analytical, and should address a) the prompt posted by the instructor OR b) a response posted by another course participant.
• Discussion leaders summarize last week’s discussion - in their own words and understanding - to the class on Monday, beginning February 2. (schedule below).
discussion leaders should compose their summary beginning after the closing of the week’s discussion on Friday evening, and Monday morning.
• Discussion leaders should email a copy of their report to cajsa.baldini@asu.edu.
The summary should be about 250-400 words. They will present a brief summary of last week’s discussion to the class on Mondays.

(Late) Paper/Assignment Submission Policy:
Assignments will be reduced ½ grade for every day they are late. All assignments are due by midnight (11:55 PM) on the due date. All written assignments should be submitted to the electronic drop-box on Blackboard in .doc or .rtf format, and will be marked up and graded in MS Word. Assignments are due 11:55 PM on the due date. Please refrain from citing the commonly used canis meus id comedit, or variations on this theme, as reason for a delayed assignment.

Essay/Paper Format:
Use MLA Format for citations. The Critical Research Paper, should be approximately 9-12 pages in length. You should use at least six secondary sources for the paper. None of these may be a web site such as Wikipedia, Smartnotes, or similar. For more information on how to use A separate worksheet will be distributed for each writing assignment.

Quizzes and Exams:
Reading quizzes will be given frequently, and deal only with the primary readings due that day.

present or arrive late. Depending on time available, quizzes may also be given online.

The final exam is open book, and administered online. It may be taken any time between May 5-9, 2009. The final exam will cover the primary and secondary readings, and lecture materials of the entire semester.

E-mail policy:
I will frequently communicate important information to the class by e-mail. It is each student’s responsibility to a) provide me with a functioning e-mail address in a timely manner b) check his/her e-mail frequently c) make sure that my e-mails can be received (not having an overly full inbox, or intercepting spam-filter).

Academic Honesty:
A student who plagiarizes part or all of a written assignment will receive an E for the assignment and further disciplinary proceedings at the instructor’s discretion. Plagiarism occurs when a student claims credit for work s/he has not done personally, and includes submitting assignments produced by another student or writer, or putting sentences or ideas originally expressed by someone else into a paper without noting their source. At the college level of study, you ought to have mastered the ability to properly distinguish in writing between your own and other writers’ ideas using quotations, paraphrase, and in-text citation of source materials. If an assignment is found to be even partially plagiarized that assignment will automatically receive an E, and the student submitting it may be subject to further disciplinary action (including, in some cases, expulsion from Arizona State University).

Be aware that I am quite proficient with a search engine and with anti-plagiarism databases. In short, if you can find it online, so can I.
