

Multilingual Computing Resources

Installing Multilingual Components for Non-Western Languages in Windows 2000 - a step-by-step guide provided by the Center for Educational Technology at Middlebury College.

URL: http://cet.middlebury.edu/rsrc_multilingual_install.php

Using the Charset Value in the <meta> Tag to Autoset Encoding for Web Pages - also from the CET at Middlebury, these examples illustrate how to include a value in your HTML code so that your web browser automatically sets the appropriate setting. Remember, the machine you are browsing from must have the appropriate font sets installed as well.

URL: http://cet.middlebury.edu/rsrc_multilingual_charset.php

Yamada Language Center Font Library - a non-English font archive covering 40 languages and including 112 fonts, in most cases, for both Windows and Mac platforms.

URL: <http://babel.uoregon.edu/yamada/fonts.html>

Alan Wood's Unicode Resources - Unicode and multilingual support in HTML, fonts, web browsers and other applications. An excellent resource with thoughtful explanations, examples and test display pages to find out if the fonts, language kits and encoding settings you've chosen are working properly.

URL: <http://www.alanwood.net/unicode/>

How to Enter Foreign Language Characters on Computers - Theory, charts and tips for inserting international characters into your word processing documents.

URL: <http://www.starr.net/is/type/kbh.html>