ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We each are accumulations of the people we associate and bond with. For me this is many, I have to first thank my family; to my wife Debbi, she is my best friend and knows me more than anyone. She has taught me more has about life, love, and understanding differences. She has seen me from the start of this journey at Mesa Community College, some 19 years ago, to looking over my shoulder, not fully understanding my work, but fully supporting me to this stage of being at the highest level of academia. An amazing GED women, wife, flasher, observation study, stellar mother, and pillar of heart to all she associates with. I thank you.

To my kids; Matthew, Ashley, Nettie, Jarum, Brandt, Brookie, and Heather are all my love. Their individuality, differences, strengths, and “my Skinner pigeons” have given me more than I could ever learn from school or books. Our family interactions have built me as a father and our joys and struggle are the foundation or my great life. You each will make your mark in the world with your passions and personalities in bettering life for so many, CARRY ON. To my mom, Alta, I am a true product of your love and work ethic in life. You have held me up so many times and are a pillar of motherhood with your support, love, and my mental check ups (keeping me sane). To my father (Normand G Platt), my heavenly mentor, the 14 years I had with you is my foundation and passion for the work I do. Joe, (my rudder of life) thank you for always being there. I have been blessed by a loving support system, which has brought me many years of hugs and tears.

Changing to my academic honors I have to recognize first Dr. Robert B. Rutherford for opening my eyes to the world of academia and helping kids in a new light. Rob is a foundation of my degree in his teaching me about Emotional Behavior Disorders and how we need to help these youth that struggle in our communities to gain understanding and acceptance. The Teacher Educators for Children with Behavioral Disorders (TECBD) conference and the “Old Rhinos” has given me life long friends with people with pure passions to help struggling youth. His death, even though a difficult journey for me, will make me a better scholar in the field of Special Education and Juvenile Justice and further his work. Youth’s behaviors are a window to their soul and when we can accept diverse youth we will serve them better, may we continue to get there, cheers.

My stellar chair Dr. Elizabeth Kozleski is a scholar and was able to open me to a new world of academia. I long to put in the time to reach her level of understanding writing, and service. She is my translator, buffer, and has patience (with adjusting my dike to open my academia experience) that is graciously appreciated. I can only repay you by taking my work and field to greater heights. My committee which includes Dr. Sarup Mathur has been my mentor and model through this road as a steady guide. I consider her a close friend and college that has helped me personally and professionally. Dr. Scott Herrmann, a man I have worked with for many years in juvenile justice and he has done amazing thing for Maricopa County and for his work in building me. He has added great insight as a median between the world of juvenile justice and education with my degree. Thank you each for your time and efforts.

To my cheering section and legs of this journey, I have to start with Dr. Wendy Oakes, even though she was going through her own dissertation at the same time, she was able to read my work and teach me the mechanics of writing and editing. She gave me hundreds of hours reading, challenged me, and held me up when it was difficult. I give honor to her and consider her a great friend and college for life. Dr. Mike Krezmien, a friend and college, looks at numbers and bringing them to life in research to understand youth and he has helped me more then he will ever know. If I could do a third of what he does, I will be a great success. I also have to give a special thanks to Dr. Katie Barclay Penkoff, Dr Gita Upreti, and Dr. Naomi Schoenfeld for there support in jumping in to help me understand more in furthering this work. Honorable mention goes to those that made a difference and helped me mentally get through this process. My colleges and close friends; Dr. Heather Griller Clark, Dr. Heather Baltodano, Dr. Aydin Bal, Dr. Amina Turton, Dani Griswold, Jackie Joslyn, and Rick & Kathy.

I would be a miss if I did not acknowledge myself; this was the hard thing I have ever done. Combined with being a father/husband (my number 1 priority), a Doctoral student, working full time as a Juvenile Probation Officer Supervisor, teaching at ASU part time (one of my loves), and living life my plate was full. This is a catalyst to my future work with furthering the understanding of youth with behavior problems (diagnosed or not) and how we can get past our bias of what behaviors we see others do to get to the help we can give and understand diversity can be a strength. Most all of the youth, teachers, and professionals that I meet are doing what they feel is right and for the right reasons. Yes even delinquent youth, the clash of understanding and learning, acceptance and isolation, and the drawing close of common and creating distance with differences limits us with really helping all youth. Thank you to all that have helped me in this and may you enjoy a piece of me through reading my dissertation.
